Short summary of idea*

Auto place cursor into required field

Application/Area

Infocapture

Description

If a user submits a form with a Required field left unpopulated, you currently see a red "growl" style error in the top-right corner. It would be really helpful if the field in question was also made "active" so that the cursor automatically went to that field and was ready to be entered, without the user having to scroll up and down a potentially long form searching for the field in question.
