Short summary of idea*
Change My Policies landing page / default view

Application/Area
Policy Manager

Description
Suggest changing the landing page when someone clicks on "Policy Manager" from the applications list, or navigating from anywhere within policies or the system, to be All Policies rather than My Policies.

Our admin Kristine says: "When you go to Policy Manager, it defaults to show you "My Policies," which are the ones that have been assigned to you to acknowledge. If no Policies are assigned to you to acknowledge, then nothing will initially appear (even if you select one of the categories). You have to switch to "All Policies" to see everything that you have access to view. Since we are not planning to assign specific P&Ps to users to acknowledge, at least not at this stage, is there a way that we can change the default view to "All Policies" or turn off the "My Policies" features altogether? I think it would be less confusing for users to navigate if they do not have to switch to "All Policies" every time they go to the app."

We are able to change the landing page to "All Policies" when you click on the app from the rubix cube app menu. However, if you are within the policies app navigating around and click on "policy manager" in the UL corner to get back to the main view, it defaults to "My Policies". As an org, we typically don't assign policies to people to acknowledge, but rather have hundreds of P&Ps that are our company's knowledge assets. We suggest providing the option to remove "My Policies" view altogether.
