Description

I've recently had a situation where I was working on a news story with a colleague. She wanted to publish it but couldn't because I was the original creator. She had publish and approve others permissions.
It would be good if someone with approve others permissions could just publish others' articles rather than just approving and the original creator having to publish. It would cut out a stage if the approver is happy with the article, or just wants to make very minor amendments before publishing.
